

Appendix C

Description of standpoints for Deddington key views

1. From Duns Tew Road, Hempton west to Chipping Norton.

This view can be seen a few hundred yards down Duns Tew Road, on the right coming from Hempton

2. From Snakehill Lane, Hempton, north-east to the Swere Valley

Visible to the right going down the upper part of Snakehill Lane when the hedgerow is trimmed. Visible from two-thirds of the way down Snakehill Lane at all times of the year.

3a. From Cosy Lane, north across the Swere Valley

Once you are clear of the houses at the top end of Cosy Lane, this view or similar is visible all the way down the hill

3b. From Cosy Lane, north-east to Kings Spring Field

When you reach the end of The Daedings houses, to the right from Cosy Lane, you have the view of this field and the copse

4a. From Hempton Road, north across the Swere Valley

The photograph of this view was taken from the Hempton Road between the end of Deddington village and Spencer's building yard, but the view is visible to the north for nearly the whole length of the Hempton Road between Hempton and Deddington

4b. From Hempton Road, south to Duns Tew

This view is most visible where the Tomwell Farm track meets the Hempton Road (where the photograph was taken) but it can be viewed through or over the hedgerow at various points along the south side of the Hempton Road

5. From Clifton Road, south to Deddington Castle earthworks

There is one longish break and some smaller in the hedgerow alongside The Poplars field on the south side of Clifton Road across to the Deddington Castle earthworks and the trees on top of them

6. From Clifton Road, north-east to Kings Sutton

This view in the photograph or similar is visible from various points along Clifton Road to the north east, especially in the stretch when you pass the last of the Deddington houses

7. From Jerusalem Lane, north-west to church tower

This view of the church is visible to the right from two-thirds of the way along Jerusalem Lane as you head southwards.

8. From Earls Lane, north to woodland

There are views of fields, hedgerows and woodland to the north all along Earls Lane.

9. From Earls Lane, south-west to church tower

This view from the south side of Earls Lane is visible from almost the whole length of the lane apart from where there is the odd tree in the way

10. From Green Hedges Lane, north towards Adderbury

This is the view from the end of Green Hedges Lane northwards. It's a fair distance from Deddington village so an unlikely candidate for development

11. From Green Hedges Lanes, south-west to church tower

This view is visible through the gaps in the hedgerow and the farm gates along the west side of Green Hedges Lane

12a. From Chapmans Lane, north to Deddington Castle earthworks

This view is visible after the last houses on Chapmans Lane through several gaps, some quite wide, through the hedgerow on the north side of the track

12b. From Chapmans Lane, north-east towards Clifton

This view is also visible after the last houses on Chapmans Lane through the gaps in the hedgerow but looking towards the north-east

12c. From Chapmans Lane, south to North Aston

This is the view from the south side of Chapmans Lane, a short distance after the last house

13. From Coombe Hill, south-east to church tower

This view is visible from most of the section of the Deddington Loop footpath leading down the south side of Coombe Hill

14a. From Grove Fields, east to church tower

There is a view of the church tower from almost all of the footpath across Grove Fields

14b. From start of Grove Fields footpath, south towards Duns Tew

This view is visible all along the first (easternmost) part of the footpath that goes from The Grove across Grove Fields. A view towards Duns Tew and Over Worton is visible from the footpath a few hundred yards west of The Grove

The remaining photographs show the lie of the land viewed from Duns Tew and North Aston, and from the top of the church tower
